

---

You learn the history of the internet while building your own personal network of notes

- You will build your own version of the memex
    - Based on things you read, things we discuss, and things I might direct your attention to
    - Parts of this memex will be pushed online for periodic review by us
    - You will be able to interlink your memex to your peers
  - This exercise mirrors the nature of the course content
  - The final assignment will involve you surfacing a journey through your notes that will answer two key questions:
    - What is the most powerful thing you have learned in this course, and why?
    - Have you achieved your goals for this course?
-

- Course is organized into three modules
  - A prehistory of the internet
  - The first internet that you might not know anything much about
  - The second internet that underpins modern life (and you were probably thinking would be the entire focus of this class).
- <https://shawngraham.github.io/hist1900>

