

How on earth can an archaeologist of the Roman construction trade end up interested in the history of the internet?

